

General information and conditions for the sale of a MunchRanch cat or kitten.

Kitten general info:

I do have a couple of conditions for sale but they are reasonable and you do not have to sign your life away to own one of these kittens.

My first condition is that you get it altered before 7 months old.

You can do that at your vet or I can do that here.

I can get a female spayed for $250 extra.

A male is $150 extra.

Microchipping is $65 extra.

To alter, the males will need to be heavy enough and their testicles have dropped to do the surgery. They can even leave the next day.

A female takes a few days to be able to leave.

They have to be heavy enough for my vet to be OK with doing the surgery.

It usually will not change the date that they can be sent to their new home.

The second request is that you keep the kitten on the same food for a minimum of 12 months after delivery.

This food must be ordered from this email (link is at the bottom) or from my website.

It is from Life's Abundance, a nutrition food company in Florida.

By agreeing to do this and setting up the autoship, you qualify for a $50 discount.

Life's Abundance is becoming so popular that they recently ran out of the canned food and suppliers were unable to meet demand. This should resolve itself soon in it has not already done so.

The people who were on Autoship were able to continue to receive their entire orders, including all the canned food that were on their autoship order.

However, for anyone who was not on autoship, and all the new customers, none were able to order any canned meat products.

When it is in stock again, be sure to add it to your autoship account. This should prevent you not being able to order canned food in the future, and do not let your autoship account expire. It cost you nothing extra to have and can be altered at any time. Sometimes people who get new credit cards or their card expires never notify Life's Abundance, so their account expires

One problem with losing or discontinuing your autoship with Life's Abundance is that you also lose your 5 year health guarantee from me should that happen.

The health guarantee is for a year, but if you choose to keep the kitten on the same food from Life's Abundance for the next 5 years, that guarantee can be extended to up to 5 years. That is for death due to most anything other than kidney failure or neglect and accidents.

That is pretty cheap insurance considering they have to eat anyway and this food is a holistic, healthy food made in Florida, not overseas.

The food is delivered to your door on an autoship bases and you will need to create an autoship account with Life's Abundance. The food will need to be there before kitty arrives, or have been ordered.

This is unless you are picking it up here and have not really had time for that to happen. In that case I will give you enough dry food and a few cans of canned food to last a few says.

If you come pick up a new kitten that is available and have not created the autoship account, you will have to set up the account with Life's Abundance as soon as you get home so it will be there in 3 days.

Not ordering the food and creating the autoship account will void the warranty and forfeit the $50 discount. (Which you probably have already been given credit for, if you agreed orally that you would do that.)

My suggestion it not to start with the starter pack.

Life's Abundance makes Grain free and Normal kibble, (which is what I use) but that is your choice. I have used both and the cats eat both. There is not a special 'kitten food' available because the kittens are eating the same thing mom is eating.

A 6# bag of the dry kibble and a case or two of the canned meat should last about a month. The canned meat comes in two flavors. I use both.

Set up your account as an autoship account and make it every 4 weeks. Then, as the need changes, you can get larger quantities, or extend or shorten the time between deliveries. I also have ordered Fish Oil. I get mine from Innovet (Innovetpet.com). It is Wild Alaskan Salmon Oil with Hemp Oil. Lifes Abundance also offers fish oil.

In order to get your $50 discount, you will need to agree to set up the autoship account, realizing that you can edit and change what you get it at any time. You can change the frequency of deliveries as well as the amount or size of the order.

It is very important to keep getting the canned food as well as the dry food if you choose to stop getting the starter pack and not all the other goodies that come with that package.

Research has shown that cats which have died sooner than the average, have often died of kidney problems.

This is often due to eating only dry for their entire life. They are obligate carnivores and need meat in the diet.

You have the option of getting only canned food, but not only dry food.

Even though dry food is made as nutritious as it can be made, dry food is made for human convenience. The cats need meat in the diet in order to be in their best health.

Kidney failure is not covered in your warranty, so you want to be sure to keep it as healthy as possible and give it the right variety of foods. There are just too many factors beyond my control which may cause kidney failure, so it is not a covered illness.

Probably the second most important thing to order is the NuVet supplement powder. It is an immune booster and having a strong immune system is critical for the rest of your kitten's life.

For only about $16 a month, you can help extend the life of your cat and give it a much healthier diet. It should be added to every canned meat dish. On container lasts 3 months!

The cost is much less than the cost of just 1 office visit to your vet.

NuVet labs is one of the top research labs for animal nutrition. Again, this is another inexpensive way to keep your cat in its best health and help it develop a much stronger immune system when it is needed most.

That starts the day you take it home and away from its momma. As loving as you will be, this is an extremely stressful time in its life.

That link is also below this email.

I put the Nu Vet powdered supplements on every meat meal. For me, that is twice a day.

The first 12 months of their life is the most important as far as growth, nutrition, development and socialization.

My advice is to give them the best you can and it will pay off in the long run.

If you are good with these two main conditions of sale, (the altering and Life's Abundance food account set up) we can proceed with the adoption.

You can come visit to test for allergies, or you can have the kitten shipped, deliver by me.

You can come see it before it is scheduled to leave.

Or we can meet somewhere in-between.

Those fees and meeting places are on my sale page. Of course you can come here for free.

Let me know if you have any more questions and if you are agreeable to my two conditions. I keep all our emails, so I will have copies of our correspondence. It is not necessary to sign anything to get a kitten from me.

To help make a kitten's adjustment time be shorter I have a few suggestions.

I would suggest that you keep it in a bathroom or utility room (with the litter box and food/water) for a day or so or as long as it takes to not be trying to hide every time someone comes in. Once he/she comes to you and wants attention, then you can take it out and put it in a room for the next step of adjustment. A bedroom is great but be aware of all the hiding places it will find if it has not become adjusted and feel safe.

Go into the temporary kitty room several times a day and pet the kitten. Pick him up and hold and pet it.

Do not hold it upside down like a baby doll. They do not like that until they are fully comfortable with you and they will do it on their own once that time comes.

Often people, especially kids want to hold it like a doll. That is a very scary position for a kitten.

It's unnatural and it feels like they are something's prey, so they do not like that.

Going into the room that the kitten is staying and doing it often, and giving it affection and attention is the fastest way for it to know you are its new family and not a threat.

It may cry the first night and be annoying, but it's not as bad as a puppy. It may not eat or poop the first day, so don't be alarmed. I have never had one die from self-starvation.

Please be aware that doing this adjustment phase correctly will last a lifetime.

Doing it incorrectly will also last a lifetime.

A traumatized kitten will have a sad life and the family who owns it will miss a wonderful opportunity for a loving and therapeutic pet.

Also, you have a week to take it to the vet for a kitty check. Take a stool sample as well. Even though they have had one round of wormer meds, and flea meds, they need to be checked for parasites.

Also, it is common for the kitten not to eat much at all until it feels comfortable with where it is. So do not be alarmed if that happens.

Being nervous and stressed out can cause loose stool. Be aware of that possibility.

If it does not clear up, take a sample to your vet to be sure it is clear of parasites.

As far as I know, they are clear of parasites, but if the vet finds any, I will pay for the meds, but not the visit.

You do not need to do any testing for things such as Leukemia because all my adults have already been tested and I have a leukemia free cattery. That is extra money the vets can get and it's not necessary unless you want to do it. Besides, if your kitten were to die of that, you get another one, or refund anyway.

I have never had to replace a kitten that died of Leukemia. But people have been scared when they went ahead and did the test that I told them not to do, and they did anyway, and they were very concerned when it came back positive.

But it was a false positive and after several months of waiting and retesting, they found out that it actually never had leukemia. Those test sometimes have false positives and that just unnecessarily scares the owners. But that is up to you if you want that or not. A positive test may not necessarily indicate a sick kitten, so your kitten will not be replaced until it has been confirmed that it actually has Leukemia, or has died. That may take up to 6 months.

The kitten will have had at least 1 or 2 sets of kitten shots and you will need to give #3 at 16 weeks, and the rabies shot when it is old enough by your vet.

I am looking forward to having one of my kittens share their life with your family.

If you have any more questions feel free to call or email.
We will keep in touch.
